Forum Guide

July 2024

Point Zero Forum is an annual gathering of 2,000 leading central bankers, regulators, policymakers, industry leaders, technologists, and investors from around the world.

Over three days of dialogue, collaboration and networking, participants work to align policy, finance and technology roadmaps, and share the latest innovations and developments to advance financial ecosystems.

The Forum serves as a pivotal platform for fostering strategic dialogues and strengthening collaborations between the public and private sectors.

Testimonials

What I really like about the forum, is the interaction between all the different views on technology, innovation, and policy making. Market participants of established, big players, new fintech and startups, and its policymakers - discuss topics from a very different perspective, and I think that is super enriching.

These kinds of forums can only be the tipping point or starting point of further collaborations, so it's a good way to start something new, starting new endeavors, and to find new partners to discuss things first.

Karmela Holtgreve

Director General Strategy & Innovation
Deutsche Bundesbank

We are very honoured and proud to support Point Zero Forum. It is a very unique place where policymakers, industry participants, and investors gather. The Forum is an opportunity for us, and for me personally, to learn about what is happening in other areas such as climate change and AI.

Michael Chen

Head of Hashkey Wealth
HashKey Group

I think there are two elements - one is the very immediate, that can be business opportunities, you can meet your clients, you can learn, get feedback, you can implement the feedback, and the other is the long-term strategic thinking from some of the inputs that you are getting from this forum and discussions, which then down the line, may impact how you do your business, and how you evolve your product offering.
